SCS WEDNESDAY WIRE | November 10, 2021
A midweek update from the SCS Dean's Office | FACIAL COVERINGS | VACCINE DATABASE

Take a moment to review the updated Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) regarding SCS's COVID guidance. In particular, see "What about food?" since several questions have been raised recently.

Stop by Hunt Library before winter break and check out University Libraries' debut exhibition, "Looking Back to Move Forward / A Re:collection of Robotics at Carnegie Mellon," in the new first floor gallery. The exhibition will open officially in January but is on view as the exhibition is installed.

CMU's 28th Annual Food Drive supporting the Greater Pittsburgh Community Food Bank, sponsored by Staff Council, is underway through November 15. Join the SCS team (we're currently on the Event Leaderboard in second place, slightly behind Tepper School of Business!) or bring physical donations to one of the drop boxes on campus.

SCS NEWS + AWARDS
— The new JPMorgan Chase & Co. AI Maker Space officially opened today. A robot cut the ceremonial ribbon to open the space, starting what will become possible when the brightest minds from across campus start working in this new space. The benefits of creativity and collaboration will become evident as student AI makers at CMU gain access to technology that will help them develop new ways to make an impact on the world.

— Mayor Bill Peduto presented keys to the City of Pittsburgh to Red Whittaker and Andrew Moore on Friday, calling the two "leaders of the fourth industrial revolution." A key to the city is an honor bestowed upon esteemed residents and visitors.

— Computer Science Ph.D. student Sara McAllister, co-advised by Nathan Beckmann and Greg Ganger, along with co-authors from CMU and Facebook won Best Paper at the 2021 Symposium on Operating Systems Principles (SOSP) last month. SOSP is the world's premier forum for researchers, developers, programmers and teachers of computer systems technology. Congratulations, Sara!

Until next week,
---- Martial
